MEET

KESHIA ADENIYI-DORSEY

CEO + PRINCIPAL FAMILY DEFENDER OF K. ADENIYI LAW, APC

Keshia Adeniyi-Dorsey, is a family defender, educator, and activist for families navigating the family policing system.

She protects sacred family bonds by representing parents in CPS investigations, juvenile dependency proceedings, and civil rights litigation—while advancing a reproductive justice framework that affirms the right to have children, not have children, and to parent with dignity, autonomy, and support.

Through her law practice, public speaking, teaching, and advocacy, Keshia serves families, lawyers, and students across California and nationally. Her work centers family integrity, abolitionist approaches to family defense, trauma-informed advocacy, and the intersection of race, gender, and state intervention in family life.

Keshia is an adjunct professor at Southwestern Law School, Chair of the American Bar Association's Commission on Youth and Family Justice, Vice President of the John M. Langston Bar Association, and an advisory board member for Movement for Family Power and Berkeley Law's Center for Reproductive Rights and Justice. Her work is informed by over a decade of trial experience—and her own lived experience in the foster system.

When she's not defending families, Keshia enjoys live music, weightlifting, DIY projects, and time with her husband and growing family.

MEET

DR. REBECCAH LYLES

CEO + FOUNDER OF MIND MEDICINE CLINIC

Dr. Rebeccah Lyles, DNP (she/her) is a psychiatric nurse practitioner, founder, and speaker for people who have the feeling that they've been performing a version of themselves that no longer fits.

Her work centers on unmasking as a leadership practice and a way of life. Through humor, self-disclosure, and deep curiosity, Dr. Lyles creates spaces where people feel safe enough to be honest, playful enough to explore, and supported enough to trust what they already know about themselves.

She is the founder of The Mind Medicine Clinic and brings a nontraditional path into mental health, blending clinical insight with lived experience. She is currently hosting her first psychedelic retreat, is matriculated this year in a psychedelic mystery school, and will soon be featured on the podcast What Your Therapist Thinks, discussing discovering neurodivergence in adulthood.

Her work resonates most with people who are ready to stop outsourcing their truth—and start living it.
